DOMESTIC VIOLENCE/ABUSE

IF YOU ARE READY TO LEAVE YOUR ABUSER, WHAT SHOULD YOU TAKE WITH YOU?¹

Before leaving the abuser, victims should remember to take important papers such as government-issued identification and birth certificates. It may not be safe for the victim to return home for some time and these papers will be invaluable as s/he seeks emergency shelter and/or new housing. The abuser may also destroy valuables or other sentimental items once the victim leaves the home. The types of items victims might want to take include the following:

Medication

Keys – house, car, office, safe

Government-issued identification for self and children

Birth certificates for self and children

Social Security cards for self and children

Passports, green cards, work permits, visas

Public Assistance ID/Medicaid Cards

Order of Protection, police reports

Money, checkbook, bank books, ATM cards, tax returns, credit cards

Divorce or separation papers

Paternity papers, as necessary

Address book

School/vaccination records

Insurance papers

Lease, rental agreement, or house deed

Car/mortgage payment book

Children's toys, security blankets, stuffed animals

Sentimental items, photos

Personalized safety plan

¹ The above information is provided from the NY City's Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence (OCDV). This information is repeated for each state under the heading of "Domestic Violence."
